Agency Overview and Organization

The FY 2000 Appropriations Act (Public Law 106-113) included a federal payment for the District Columbia College Access program, which affords high school graduates from the District of Columbia the benefits of in-State tuition at State colleges and universities outside the District of Columbia, and for other purposes. In FY 2001, the President's proposed budget would include funds to continue this program. In general, it is the purpose of this Act to establish a program that enables college-bound residents of the District of Columbia to have greater choices among institutions of higher education.

Through the College Access program the Mayor may award grants to eligible institutions that enroll eligible students to pay the difference between the tuition and fees charged for in-State students and the tuition and fees charged for out-of-State students on behalf of each eligible student enrolled in the eligible institution. The maximum student amounts is not more than $10,000 for any one award year (as defined in section 481 of the Higher Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 1088)); and a total of not more than $50,000. However, the Mayor may prorate payments under this section for students who attend an eligible institution on less than a full-time basis.

To be eligible for the program students must:

- currently be District residents and have lived in the District for at least 12 months prior to the beginning of their freshman year of college;
- have graduated from high school or received an equivalent of secondary school diploma on or after January 1, 1998;
- began an undergraduate course of study within three years of graduating from high school; (excluding any period of service on active duty in the Armed Forces, or service under the Peace Corp Act) or graduation from a secondary school diploma;
- enrolled or accepted for enrollment, on at least a half-time, in a degree, certificate, or other program (including a program of study abroad approved for credit by the institution at which such student is enrolled leading to a recognized educational credential at an eligible institution;
- if enrolled in an eligible institution, is maintaining satisfactory progress in the course of study the student is pursuing in accordance with section 484 (c) of the Higher Education Act of 1965; and
- have not completed the individual's first undergraduate baccalaureate course of study.

There are two types of subsidies available for District residents:

- For District residents who attend public colleges or universities in Maryland and Virginia, the program will pay the difference between in-state and out-of-state tuition of up to $10,000 per year with a lifetime cap of $50,000 per student.
- For District students who attend private colleges in the local Washington, DC area and private historically black colleges and universities in Maryland and Virginia, the legislation authorizes grants of up to $2,500 per year with a lifetime cap of $12,500 per student.

Applications for the program can be picked up at One Judiciary Square in Suite 1040, or through local public and private high schools, participating colleges and universities, public libraries, and other organizations that are involved in secondary educational activities, or by calling 202-727-2824. The priority deadline for submitting applications is June 30, 2000.
